Do you want to be on this call Jeffrey?

> Joi--Thank you for your e-mail. The MIT/ID3 conference was truly useful-- very impressive group of participants, well considered agenda, excellent format, with the break out discussion groups. It was a privilege to participate and I hope very much to continue to engage with many of the people I met who are involved in the VC space. In that regard, I am very interested in the MIT Bitcoin Project and would like to hear about it in detail. Perhaps we could set up a call next Wednesday or Thursday, or if that runs into your Labor Day plans, the following week? Also, yesterday Jeffrey offered to provide us in written form some of his thoughts on virtual currency. Among other things, I'd be very interested in both your views on, for example, potential benefits and risks/disadvantages of various VC models; new models or permutations that we might see in the future and how VC could evolve over time; outstanding technical, economic, and regulatory that need to be addressed/major barriers and drivers of adoption; and anything else that comes to mind. Sincerely, Anne W.
